End of academic year study trip to Algarve

At the end of the academic year professor and students of the post-graduate studies on gardens and landscape organized a trip just to visit gardens. In 2012 they went to Ponte de Lima and visited some gardens and villas in the north of Portugal and in the end of the academic year of 2012-2013 they went to Algarve and the Mediterranean Garden Society organized the visits. Besides the more lively moments, we have all shared knowledge and enthusiasm for Algarvean gardens and new forms of gardening and water saving.

G&L at Dumbarton Oaks

Dumbarton Oaks is a research center of Harvard University where researchers can work in three areas of studies such as Gardens and Landscape Studies, Pre-Columbian Studies and Byzantine Studies. Each year they select a group of researchers who receive fellowships to do research at the general library or at the Rare Book Collection of Dumbarton Oaks. Professor Ana Duarte Rodrigues was enrolled in this year program. It stands out as the joyful academic environment which was shown at the Fellows reception.

Call for papers

We want to remind all the scientific community that the call for papers for Gardens & Landscape Journal is open until the 31 January 2014. There is another call for contributions, the e-dictionary on Portuguese Gardens and Landscapes in English and online, that will also be available with free access at the G&LP Journal's site. The Scientific Committee is the same of the G&LP journal. E-Dictionary's launch will be in October 2014, and you can submit contributions up to 500 words in English language on Portuguese villas, gardens and parks, Portuguese landscape architects, gardeners and specific Portuguese vocabulary such as "alegrete"; "Pátio dos bichos", etc. The call is open until 30 June 2014.
